- “Schedule” means a schedule to the Act;
- “section” means a section of the Act;
- “taxpayer” means a natural person, an estate of a deceased person, an insolvent estate and a trust;
- “the Act” means the Income Tax Act 58 of 1962;
- “the Commissioner” includes any employee of SARS who has the delegated power to exercise and perform certain duties; and
- any other word or expression bears the meaning ascribed to it in the Act.

All guides, interpretation notes and returns referred to in this Note are available on the SARS website at www.sars.gov.za. Unless indicated otherwise, the latest issues of these documents should be consulted.

1. Purpose

This Note provides guidance on the application of section 66(13A) and the discretionary power vested in the Commissioner to grant permission to a person other than a company, for example, a natural person or trust, to submit accounts for a period that differs from the year of assessment ending on the last day of February.

The Note deals primarily with natural persons and trusts carrying on a trade. A brief discussion is also included on the application of section 66(13A) to share purchase arrangements, public benefit organisations (PBOs), small business funding entities (SBFEs), the estate of a deceased person and insolvent estates.

The position of companies is not dealt with in the Note. Interpretation Note 90 “Year of Assessment of a Company: Accounts Accepted to a Date other than the Last Day of a Company’s Financial Year” deals with the discretionary power vested in the Commissioner to accept financial accounts of a company for a period ending on a day that differs from the last day of the company’s financial year under section 66(13C).

2. Background

Under section 66(1) the Commissioner must issue a public notice each year prescribing which persons are required to furnish income tax returns. For example, not all natural persons are required to submit a return, while a trust that is a resident¹ is required to submit a return regardless of whether income is generated.

Save for a few exceptions (for example, when a person dies or a trust is terminated), the return for normal tax of a person (other than a company) must be for the whole period of twelve months ending on the last day of February.² In most instances, therefore, the year of assessment runs from 1 March of a year to the last day of February of the succeeding year.

Section 66(13A), however, provides that a person other than a company may apply to the Commissioner for permission to draw up accounts to a date other than the last day of February. If the Commissioner is satisfied that the whole or some portion of the taxpayer's income cannot be conveniently returned for any year of assessment, the Commissioner may approve the application.

3. The law

The relevant provisions of the Act are quoted in the Annexure.

4. Application of the law

4.1 Accounts drawn up for a period (accounting period) that differs from the year of assessment [section 66(13A)]

4.1.1 General

Section 66(13A) may find application if there are circumstances which makes it difficult to render accounts for the 12-month period ending on the last day of February and a person other than a company wants to apply for permission to close their accounts for all or part of their income on a day other than the last day of February. In such event, if the Commissioner is satisfied that the income cannot be conveniently returned for the 12-month period ending on the last day of February, the Commissioner may approve that the taxpayer draw up accounts for a period ending on an agreed date and subject to any conditions specified. Section 66(13A) deems the income for the accounting period to be the income for the year of assessment ending on the last day of February. The taxpayer is not required to apportion any income for the accounting period to fall into the year of assessment.

A person other than a company includes a natural person, an estate of a deceased person, an insolvent estate and a trust.³

¹ Under paragraph (b) of the definition of "resident" in section 1(1), a trust which is established or formed in South Africa or has its place of effective management in South Africa, will be a resident.

³ The term "trust" is defined in section 1(1) as any trust fund consisting of cash or other assets that are administered and controlled by a person acting in a fiduciary capacity where such person is appointed under a deed of trust or by agreement or under a will of a deceased person.

Approval to submit accounts to a date other than the last day of February is limited to income derived from a business or profession. Such a business or profession must not be conducted in the form of a separate legal entity. The Commissioner will not permit taxpayers to draw up their returns for a period other than the statutory year of assessment ending on the last day of February for any other income such as remuneration, interest, rentals, royalties and dividends, which is not part of the business or profession for which approval was granted.

A decision of the Commissioner under section 66(13A) is not subject to objection and appeal.⁴

A distinction must be made between a “year of assessment” as defined in section 1(1), and the “accounting period” for which accounts are drawn up. The term “year of assessment” in relation to persons other than companies “means any year or other period in respect of which any tax or duty leviable under this Act is chargeable”. Section 5(1)(c) sets out when income tax is chargeable for persons other than companies and provides that subject to the Fourth Schedule there shall be paid annually for the benefit of the National Revenue Fund, an income tax (referred to as normal tax in the Act) in respect of the taxable income received by or accrued to or in favour of any person (other than a company) during the year of assessment ending during the period of 12 months ending the last day of February each year. Generally, the year of assessment of a natural person or trust runs from 1 March of one year to the last day of February of the next year. However, in some situations the year of assessment can commence during the year ending on the last day of February (for example, when a natural person is born or when a trust is established) and it may also end before the end of February (for example, when a natural person dies or the existence of a trust is terminated). The year of assessment may thus not always comprise a period of 12 months.

The “year of assessment” is not changed by section 66(13A). It will not coincide with the accounting period approved by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) for which the accounts of the business are drawn up.

For purposes of section 66(13A) the term “income” is not used in the sense as defined in section 1(1) but rather in the sense of “taxable income”. Such an interpretation is necessary in order to ensure that any deductions or allowances relating to an accounting period can be taken back or carried forward to a year of assessment.⁵ In addition, section 66(13B) provides that, for purposes of section 66(13A), income includes any aggregate capital gain or aggregate capital loss (see 4.1.5).

While accounts for a business or profession may be submitted to a date different from the year of assessment if approved by the Commissioner under section 66(13A), the last day of February will be the operative date for all other purposes of the Act,⁶ for example, the rebates and rates of tax will be governed by the statutory year of assessment.

⁴ See section 3(4)(b) which does not include section 66(13A).

⁶ Assuming that the year of assessment does not terminate before the last day of February owing to the death or the sequestration of the natural person.

The approval to draw accounts to a date other than the end of February under section 66(13A) relates to the income included in the return for normal tax. The impact of the approval under section 66(13A) is limited and does not impact on the person's other responsibilities under the Act, for example, if the person is an employer, their obligation to issue employees' tax certificates for the periods and within the timeframes required under paragraph 13(2) of the Fourth Schedule is not impacted. Similarly, IT3 returns for remuneration not subject to employees' tax, interest, rentals, royalties and the like must also be compiled up to the last day of February for the year of assessment, even when accounts of a taxpayer's business are made up to some other date.

Example 1 – Person carrying on business in addition to receiving a salary

Facts:

In 2018 a trader was granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for the trading business for the year ending 30 June on condition that the results are taken back to each immediately preceding year of assessment. The approval was granted for the initial accounting period comprising the 16 months ending 30 June 2019 and subsequent years ending on 30 June. The trader also derives a monthly salary.

Result:

The trader's annual statutory year of assessment covers the period 1 March to the last day of February. The accounts for business for the period 1 March 2018 to 30 June 2019 must be included in the 2019 year of assessment. In subsequent years of assessment, the accounts for the business covering the period 1 July to 30 June must be included.

The salary for the period 1 March 2018 to 28 February 2019 must be included in the 2019 year of assessment that covers the same period. Similarly, the salary for the period 1 March 2019 to 29 February 2020 must be included in the 2020 year of assessment that covers the same period.

The taxable income from the business for the 16 month period from 1 March 2018 to 30 June 2019 must be accounted for in the 2019 year of assessment ended on 28 February 2019 while the taxable income for the business for the 12 month period from 1 July 2019 to 30 June 2020 must be accounted for in the 2020 year of assessment ended 29 February 2020.

If approval is granted to render accounts up to the end of September, it will be granted on condition that the income is subject to tax in the year of assessment ending on the last day of February of the same year. By contrast, if approval to render accounts ending after September of a year, it will be granted on the basis that the income will be subject to tax in the year of assessment ending on the last day of February following the closing date of the accounts. This principle can be demonstrated as follows:

By choosing an accounting date that falls within the period from March to September, the income accruing after the last day of February up to the date the accounting records are drawn up, will be taxed at the rates of tax and rebates applicable to the year ending February of that calendar year.

Example 2 – Accounts rendered up to 30 September

Facts:

B was granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for the 2020 year of assessment for income derived from farming operations for the period 1 October 2019 to 30 September 2020.

Result:

The income derived from farming operations for the period 1 March 2019 to 30 September 2020 must be included in the 2020 annual return of income and will be taxable at the rate of tax applicable to the year of assessment ended 29 February 2020. The rebates for the 2020 year of assessment will apply. Other income such as remuneration and interest must be returned for the 12 months ended 29 February 2020.

Example 3 – Business with a closing date of 31 December

Facts:

C was granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for the 2020 year of assessment for C's plumbing business for the period 1 January 2019 to 31 December 2019.

Result:

The income from the plumbing business for the year ended 31 December 2019 will be taxable in the year of assessment ended 29 February 2020. The rate of tax chargeable and rebates allowable are those applicable to the 2020 year of assessment. Other income for the period 1 March 2019 to 29 February 2020 must be included in the annual return of income for the 2020 year of assessment. Payments for provisional tax will be in line with the year of assessment ended 29 February 2020 (see 4.3 for a discussion on provisional tax and accounting periods).

Example 4 – Trusts and their beneficiaries

Facts:

ABC Trust, a discretionary trust, was granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for its trading activities to 30 June of each year. Its profits from trading during the period 1 July 2019 to 30 June 2020 were R100 000. An amount of R80 000 was vested in and distributed to beneficiary D on 30 June 2020 out of those profits leaving R20 000 to be retained in the trust.

Result:

Section 66(13A) deems the income to have accrued to the trust in the 2020 year of assessment.

However, under section 25B(1) and (2), if the trustees of a discretionary trust exercise their decision to vest income in a beneficiary before the end of trust's year of assessment, that amount is deemed to accrue to the beneficiary and not the trust. Under section 25B(3) the beneficiary may qualify for related deductions and allowances. In the context of section 66(13A) read with section 25B(1) and (2), if the Commissioner has granted the taxpayer approval to render accounts for an agreed period, in assessing whether the requirements of section 25B(2) have been met, the trustees must exercise their discretion in relation to income covered by those accounts by the end of the agreed period, in this case 30 June 2020. The trustees of ABC Trust exercised their discretion by 30 June 2020 and as a result the relevant income is deemed to have accrued to the beneficiary in the year of assessment ended February 2020 and not to the ABC Trust. Accordingly assuming all the expenses qualified for a deduction, for the year of assessment ended 29 February 2020 the trust will be taxed on taxable income of R20 000 and beneficiary D will be taxed on taxable income of R80 000.

4.1.2 Partnerships

A partnership (or unincorporated joint venture) is the relationship existing between two or more persons who join together to carry on a trade, business or profession. A partnership is not a separate legal person⁷ or taxpayer.⁸ The individual partners are taxed on their share of profits from the partnership.⁹ For purposes of applying section 66(13A), all the partners must agree to the request to submit accounts to a date other than the last day of February and each partner must apply individually to render accounts to that date.

⁸ Chipkin (Natal) (Pty) Ltd v C: SARS 2005 (5) SA 566 (SCA), 67 SATC 243 at 249.

⁹ Section 24H(5)(a).

4.1.3 Share purchase arrangements

Trusts created by an employer (a company) as structures for share-purchase arrangements designed to benefit employees of the company normally have the same year-end for accounting purposes as the company. Permission may be granted by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to the trust to submit accounts drawn up in accordance with the year-end of the company for its year of assessment ending on the last day of February. In most of these types of trusts the main source of taxable income will consist of passive income such as interest.

If approved, all income received by or accrued to a share-purchase trust may be returned to the date approved for submitting its accounts.

4.1.4 Multiple sources of business income with differing accounting periods

A taxpayer with more than one source of business income may apply to have different accounting dates for each source of business income. A separate application must be submitted for each business.

Example 5 – Multiple businesses with differing closing dates

Facts:

X, an individual, applied before the end of the 2020 year of assessment to submit accounts for X's various businesses as follows:

- Partnership business End of March
- Farming operations End of June

Result:

Provided that the request is properly motivated, permission will be granted by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) for X to draw up the accounts for the partnership and farming operation to the end of March and June respectively. In both instances the results will be accounted for in the immediately preceding year of assessment, that is, the results for the period 1 April 2019 to 31 March 2020 and 1 July 2019 to 30 June 2020 will be included in the 2020 year of assessment ended 29 February 2020. For future years of assessment, results for the years ending 31 March and 30 June will be accounted for in the immediately preceding years of assessment (for example, income for the two businesses for the respective periods of 1 April 2020 to 31 March 2021 and 1 July 2020 to 30 June 2021 must be accounted for in the year of assessment ending 28 February 2021).

4.1.5 Capital gains and losses (paragraphs 6 and 7 of the Eighth Schedule)

Capital gains and capital losses (paragraphs 6 and 7 of the Eighth Schedule)

Section 66(13B) provides that the word “income” in section 66(13A) includes any aggregate capital gain or aggregate capital loss. The aggregate capital gain or aggregate capital loss is determined by adding together all the capital gains for the year of assessment and any other capital gains which are required to be taken into account and subtracting all the capital losses for the year of assessment.¹⁰ In addition, for a natural person or a special trust the annual exclusion must be taken into account.

A person’s capital gain or capital loss is determined for a year of assessment. Such a determination must be made in the year of assessment in which an asset is disposed of or in a later year of assessment when, for example, further proceeds are derived or further expenditure is incurred in relation to the asset disposed of.¹¹

A capital gain or capital loss arising in an accounting period may, therefore, be carried back to the preceding year of assessment or to a subsequent year of assessment if it relates to a business for which the Commissioner has granted approval under section 66(13A).

A capital gain or capital loss that is unrelated to a business for which an accounting period applies must be accounted for in the year of assessment in which it arises.

Example 6 – Treatment of capital gains

Facts:

Permission is granted by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to a farmer to draw up accounts with a closing date of 30 June for the farming operation. During the period 1 March 2019 to 30 June 2020 the farmer realised capital gains on the following assets:

- 30 June 2020 – Tractor used in the farming operation
- 30 April 2020 – Holiday home
- 25 March 2019 – Listed shares

Result:

The capital gain on disposal of the tractor must be accounted for in the accounts covering the year ended 30 June 2020 and the taxable income from the farming operations for that period (including the capital gain) must be brought to account in the 2020 year of assessment covering the period 1 March 2019 to 29 February 2020.

The capital gain on disposal of the holiday home must be accounted for in the 2021 tax return covering the period 1 March 2020 to 28 February 2021, since it is unrelated to the farming operation.

¹⁰ Paragraphs 6 and 7 of the Eighth Schedule set out the general rules for determining an aggregate capital gain or aggregate capital loss for a year of assessment. See the Comprehensive Guide to Capital Gains Tax for a detailed discussion on an aggregate capital gain and aggregate capital loss.

¹¹ Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the Eighth Schedule set out the general rules for determining a capital gain or capital loss for a year of assessment.

The capital gain on disposal of the listed shares must be accounted for in the 2020 tax return covering the period 1 March 2019 to 29 February 2020, since it is unrelated to the farming operation.

4.1.6 Foreign Income

- Foreign interest - A taxpayer that receives an annual certificate from a foreign financial institution that reflects interest earned during the year of assessment of the foreign country must make an equitable apportionment of the income and tax over the year of assessment. The appropriate portions can then be allocated to the relevant South African year of assessment, taking into account the requirements of section 24J.
- Remuneration normally accrues on a monthly basis and may be easily accounted for in a year of assessment. Variable remuneration contemplated in section 7B such as overtime pay, bonuses, commission, allowances for transport expenses and leave pay is deemed to accrue to an employee when it is paid and can also be conveniently accounted for in the year of assessment in which it is deemed to accrue.
- Taxpayers conducting a business offshore may apply for permission to draw up accounts for a period used for financial reporting purposes in the foreign country concerned.

4.1.7 Estate of a deceased person or insolvent estate [section 66(13A)(c)]

The term “person” as defined in section 1(1) includes an estate of a deceased person and an insolvent estate. These estates are therefore separate persons for income tax purposes and are registered in their own capacity as taxpayers.

The taxable income of a person that dies must be determined for the period from the beginning of the year of assessment in which the person dies to and including the date of death.¹² Under paragraph (i) of the proviso to section 66(13)(a) if a person dies, a return must be made for the period commencing on the first day of that year of assessment and ending on the date of death. In the year in which the person dies, the period from the first day of the year of assessment to and including the date of death will be the “year of assessment” as defined in section 1(1). The estate of a deceased person is a separate person for income tax and will need to account for taxable income and submit returns commencing on the day after the date of death.

If a person’s estate is sequestrated, paragraph (ii) of the proviso to section 66(13)(a) provides that separate returns must be made by the insolvent and the insolvent estate, one commencing on 1 March up to and including the day before the date of sequestration and one commencing on the date of sequestration and ending on the last day of the period. The period in this case being the period of 12 months ending on the last day of February.

¹² Definition of “person” in section 1(1) and section 5(1).

In the case of a taxpayer that is granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts to a date falling within the year of assessment and –

- the person concerned dies; or
- the person's estate is sequestrated

during the interim period between that date (the date approved by the Commissioner) and the last day of the year of assessment, any income received by or accrued to that person during that interim period must be deemed to be part of that person's income for the year of assessment. See Example 7.

If the deceased or insolvent estate receives any income from the individual's business or profession after the date of death or sequestration, the estate may submit a request under section 66(13A). The permission granted under section 66(13A) to the natural person before death or sequestration does not automatically apply to the estate.

Example 7 – Accounts rendered up to 31 August for deceased person

Facts:

Some years ago D was granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for the year of assessment for income derived from business operations for the period 1 August to 31 July each year. D died on 15 September 2020.

D also earned remuneration and interest income.

Result:

The income derived from business operations for the year ending 31 July 2020 must be included in the 2020 return of income and will be taxable at the rate of tax applicable to the year of assessment ended 29 February 2020. The rebates for the 2020 year of assessment will also apply. Remuneration and interest for the period 1 March 2019 to 29 February 2020 must also be included in the 2020 return of income.

Any income derived from the business operations from 1 August 2020 up to and including the date of death (15 September 2020) must be included in the year of assessment ending on 15 September 2020. In that regard, the executor will need to draw up accounts for the period 1 August 2020 to 15 September 2020. The return for the year of assessment ending 15 September 2020 must also include remuneration and interest for the period 1 March 2020 to 15 September 2020.

Any income derived by the business after the date of death must be accounted for by the deceased estate which must register as a separate taxpayer with its own tax reference number. Interest income earned by the deceased estate after the date of death will also need to be accounted for by the deceased estate. The year of assessment of the deceased estate will end on the last day of February since the permission granted to D under section 66(13A) does not automatically apply to the deceased estate. The deceased estate may apply to render accounts for a different period regarding the business-related income derived by the deceased estate from 16 September 2020 onwards.

4.1.8 Public benefit organisations and small business funding entities

A public benefit organisation (PBO) and a small business funding entity (SBFE) respectively approved under section 30(3) and 30C can operate in the form of a trust. PBOs and SBFEs are obliged to render annual income tax returns notwithstanding that some or all of their receipts and accruals may be exempt from income tax under section 10(1)(cN) or 10(1)(cQ) respectively.

A PBO that is a trust may apply under section 66(13A) for permission to draw up accounts for a period ending on a date other than the last day of February. The income of such a PBO, including investment income, must be returned to the date approved for submitting the accounts of the PBO, since it is inherently part of the PBO's funds to be used in the ordinary course of its activities. The same applies to an SBFE.

4.1.9 Conditions for Commissioner's approval

The following factors will be considered before the Commissioner approves an application:

- An application to render accounts to a date other than the last day of February should not have negative consequences for the fiscus. The early closing of accounts may lead to the manipulation of the income or expenditure of a person, for example, the deferral of income derived during peak seasons. Approval will be granted only if the Commissioner is satisfied that the purpose for the request is not to obtain a tax benefit and may be subject to specified conditions.
- Each application will be considered on its own merits by taking the specific circumstances of the taxpayer into account.
- An application for an accounting period must be in writing and reasons detailing the special circumstances to be taken into account must be furnished. Taxpayers must provide supporting information and documentation in order to enable the Commissioner to make an informed decision.
- The application must be submitted to a SARS branch office within a reasonable period before the end of February. Failure to submit an application within a reasonable period may result in approval not being granted before the end of the year of assessment. This will result in the taxpayer being assessed for that year of assessment on the basis that no application was submitted.
- A new application must be submitted if the taxpayer's circumstances change and the taxpayer wants to change the accounting period back to February or to another date.

4.2 Provisional tax [paragraphs 1, 21(1) and 23A of the Fourth Schedule]

A taxpayer qualifying as a provisional taxpayer as defined in paragraph 1 of the Fourth Schedule is liable for the payment of provisional tax. Paragraph 21(1) and 23A(1) provide that the payment of provisional tax is payable twice a year with an optional additional payment (third payment, if applicable) as follows:

- First payment – On or before six months after the commencement of the year of assessment, that is, 31 August.
- Second payment – On or before the end of the year of assessment, that is, the last day of February.

- Third payment – On or before seven months after the end of the year of assessment, that is, 30 September. If the taxpayer was granted permission under section 66(13A) to render accounts for a period ending on a date other than the last day of February, this period is reduced to on or before six months after the end of the year of assessment.¹³

In the context of provisional tax, it is particularly important to note that if –

- a day notified by SARS or specified in the Act for payment, submission or other action; or
- the last day of a period within which payment, submission or other action under the Act must be made,

falls on a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday, the action must be done not later than the last business day before the Saturday, Sunday or public holiday.¹⁴

4.3 Provisional tax and accounting periods [paragraph 21(2) of the Fourth Schedule]

A taxpayer granted approval to submit accounts to a date falling after the last day of February (that is, from March to September), may apply under paragraph 21(2) of the Fourth Schedule to make provisional tax payments in line with the closing date of the accounts.

Paragraph 21(2) will not apply if accounts are drawn up for dates ending after September but before the last day of February because the closing date will fall within the year of assessment and not after it. In these circumstances, provisional tax payments must be made on 31 August, last day of February and 31 August.¹⁵

If permission is granted under section 66(13A) to draw accounts up to a date after the last day of February but ending on or before the end of September and the taxpayer wants to change its provisional tax payment dates, the taxpayer must apply in writing, detailing the special circumstances to be taken into account. Each member of a partnership must apply, since the circumstances of each member of the partnership must be considered individually. As noted above, the Commissioner may, having regard to the circumstances of the case, approve provisional tax payments to fall in line with the dates as approved for the accounting periods. This discretion is subject to objection and appeal.¹⁶

Approval to pay provisional tax in line with the accounting period will not be granted automatically. It will be conditional on the income derived from the trading activities for which the accounting period is allowed being the main source of income giving rise to the liability to pay provisional tax. In other words, in exercising the discretion in paragraph 21(2), the Commissioner will approve payments for provisional tax in accordance with the main source of income.

¹³ Paragraph 23A and section 89*quat*. For more information on provisional tax, see Interpretation Note 1 Provisional Tax Estimates.

¹⁴ Section 244(1) of the Tax Administration Act 28 of 2011.

¹⁵ Paragraph (b) of the definition of “effective date” in section 89*quat*(1) applies if approval was granted to submit accounts to a date ending other than on the last day of February.

¹⁶ See section 3(4)(e).

Example 8 – Determination of dates to pay provisional tax*Facts:*

A taxpayer received the following income:

- Income derived from business operations which was the person's main source of income with a February year-end.
- Income derived from farming operations – approval was granted by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to submit accounts with a June year-end.

Result:

The taxpayer will not receive approval to make payments of provisional tax on dates other than 31 August and the last day of February, since the main source of income is from business operations. The third payment must be made by 31 August (if applicable).

In most instances the first day of the accounting year will be regarded as the date from which the period for the first payment will be reckoned and the last day of the accounting year will be regarded as the date on or before which the second payment must be made. In the year of conversion, the first payment for provisional tax will be six months from the commencement of the year of assessment in question. The third payment, if applicable, will be six months after the end of the day preceding the anniversary of the date approved by the Commissioner under paragraph 21(2) for purposes of determining the first and second periods.¹⁷

Example 9 – Change from February year-end to July year-end*Facts:*

F, an individual, has in the past submitted accounts for a farming operation with a closing date ending on the last day of February, the last such accounts having been submitted for the year ended 28 February 2019.

F has applied for permission under section 66(13A) to submit accounts for the farming operation, which is F's main source of income, to the end of 31 July commencing with the 2020 year of assessment. The request was approved by the Commissioner on condition that the results for the period 1 March 2019 to 31 July 2020 are included in the 2020 year of assessment. F has applied for permission to make provisional tax payments in line with the closing date of the accounts under paragraph 21(2) of the Fourth Schedule.

¹⁷ Paragraph 21 and 23A and section 89*quat*.

Result:

The payments for provisional tax for the year of assessment ending on the last day of February 2020 and subsequent years of assessment may be approved as follows:

For the 2020 year of assessment (which includes the accounts for farming operations – 1 March 2019 to 31 July 2020):

- 1st payment – On or before six months after the date of the commencement of the 2020 year of assessment, that is, 30 August 2019 (31 August falls on a Saturday)
- 2nd payment – On or before the accounting date, that is, 31 July 2020
- 3rd payment – On or before six months after the accounting date, that is, 31 January 2021

For the 2021 and subsequent years of assessment: (which includes the accounts for farming activities – 1 August 2020 to 31 July 2021):

- 1st payment – On or before six months after the date of commencement of the year, (the accounting date) that is, 29 January 2021 (31 January 2021 is a Sunday)
- 2nd payment – On or before the end of the year, (the accounting date) that is, 30 July 2021 (31 July 2021 is a Saturday)
- 3rd payment – On or before six months after the end of the year, (the accounting date) that is, 31 January 2022

Since F's main source of income is from farming operations, all other income such as interest, remuneration and rent must still be accounted for during the 12 months ending on the last day of February and must be taken into account in calculating the payment of provisional tax on the dates indicated above.

Example 10 – Change of accounting date from February to SeptemberFacts:

G, an individual, who always submitted accounts on the last day of February, has requested permission from the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to submit them on 30 September, with effect from the 2020 year of assessment. G also requested permission to pay provisional tax in line with the accounting date.

Result:

For the 2019 year of assessment, G would have submitted accounts for the period 1 March 2018 to 28 February 2019. If approval of G's request is granted for the 2020 year of assessment, G will submit accounts for the period 1 March 2019 to 30 September 2020, that is, an extended period of 19 months.

Payments for provisional tax for the 2020 year of assessment will be payable as follows:

- 1st payment – On or before six months after the date of the commencement of the 2020 year of assessment, that is, 30 August 2019 (31 August falls on a Saturday)

- 2nd payment – On or before the end of the year (the accounting date) that is, 30 September 2020
- 3rd payment – On or before six months after the end of the accounting date, that is, 31 March 2021

Payments for provisional tax for the 2021 and subsequent years of assessment will be payable on the following dates:

- 1st payment – On or before six months after the date of commencement of the year, (the accounting date) that is, 31 March
- 2nd payment – On or before the accounting date, that is, 30 September
- 3rd payment – On or before six months after the end of the year, (the accounting date) that is, 31 March

Example 11 – Change of accounting date from February to December

Facts:

H, an individual, who always submitted accounts on the last day of February, has requested permission from the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to submit accounts on 31 December, with effect from the 2021 year of assessment. H also requested permission to pay provisional tax in line with the accounting date.

Result:

If the approval was granted, for the 2020 year of assessment H would have submitted accounts for the period 1 March 2019 to 29 February 2020. For the 2021 year of assessment H will submit accounts for the period 1 March 2020 to 31 December 2020 which is a short period of 10 months.

Payments for provisional tax for the 2021 and subsequent years of assessment will be payable as follows (see second paragraph of 4.3 below):

- 1st payment – On or before six months after the commencement of the year of assessment, that is, 31 August
- 2nd payment – On or before the end of the year of assessment, that is, the last day of February
- 3rd payment – On or before six months after the year of assessment, that is, 31 August

Since the accounts are drawn up to the end of December, provisional tax payments must be made on the 31 August, the last day of February and the following 31 August (if applicable). If any of these dates fall on a Saturday, Sunday or public holiday the relevant date will be the last preceding business day.

4.4 Interest on underpayments and overpayments of provisional tax (paragraph 23A of the Fourth Schedule)

Under section 89*quat*(2), in a case other than a company, interest is levied at the prescribed rate on the underpayment of provisional tax from the effective date until the date of assessment of normal tax if the taxable income, as finally determined, for the year of assessment exceeds R50 000.

Under paragraph 23A of the Fourth Schedule, a provisional taxpayer may reduce the interest payable under section 89*quat* by making an additional payment before the effective date as defined in section 89*quat*(1).

The “effective date” in relation to any year of assessment for a person (other than a company) who has not been granted permission to render accounts for a period ending on a date other than the last day of February, is the date falling seven months after the last day of such year.¹⁸

If the taxpayer has been granted permission to render accounts for a period other than a period ending on the last day of February, the effective date will be six months after the last day of the year of assessment or, if approval was given to determine and pay provisional tax based on the accounting period under paragraph 21(2), six months after the closing date of the accounts.¹⁹

Example 12 – Determination of the effective date for section 89*quat* purposes

Facts:

A taxpayer received permission from the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for the taxpayer’s business ending 30 October of each year.

Since the closing date of the accounts fall within the year of assessment and not after it, paragraph 21(2) of the Fourth Schedule does not apply and the taxpayer had to submit provisional tax returns and made corresponding payments no later than 31 August and the last day of February of every year. For the 2020 year of assessment, the taxpayer submitted provisional tax returns and made payments on 30 August 2019 (since 31 August 2019 falls on a Saturday) and 28 February 2020 (since 29 February 2020 falls on a Saturday). The payments made were less than the normal tax payable.

Result:

The taxpayer could make a third payment on or before the effective date to avoid or reduce interest payable under section 89*quat*. Since paragraph 21(2) does not apply to the taxpayer, the effective date is 31 August.²⁰ Therefore, the taxpayer should make an additional payment on or before 31 August 2020 in order to avoid or reduce any interest under section 89*quat*.

4.5 Trading stock and livestock

4.5.1 Trading stock [section 22(6)(b)]

Section 22 specifies how trading stock held and not disposed of at the beginning and end of a year of assessment must be accounted for. Section 22(6)(b) provides that any reference in section 22 to the beginning or end of a year of assessment includes a reference to the beginning or end of an accounting period accepted by the Commissioner under section 66(13A).

¹⁸ Paragraph (a) of the definition of “effective date” under section 89*quat*(1).

¹⁹ Paragraph (b) of the definition of “effective date” under section 89*quat*(1) read with paragraph 21(2) of the Fourth Schedule.

²⁰ Paragraph (b) of the definition of “effective date” in section 89*quat*(1) applies if approval was granted to submit accounts to a date ending other than on the last day of February.

It follows that when accounts are accepted by the Commissioner to a date other than the last day of the year of assessment, section 22(6)(b) requires that trading stock must be accounted for at the beginning and end of the accounting period.

4.5.2 Livestock [paragraph 1(a) of the First Schedule]

Section 22 does not apply to farming. Paragraph 1(a) of the First Schedule contains a provision similar to section 22(6) for the purposes of determining the dates when opening and closing stock of livestock and produce on hand must be accounted for by a farmer.

4.6 Effective dates of legislation

Generally, effective dates of income tax legislation take two forms, namely –

- an effective date that is linked to the timing of a transaction (for example, the timing of a receipt or accrual, incurral of expenditure or disposal of an asset); or
- an effective date that applies to a year of assessment.

In applying section 66(13A) taxpayers need to be aware of changes in legislation that occur outside a year of assessment but during the accounting period. Exactly how such changes will affect a particular transaction will depend on the wording of the relevant effective date provision and it is not possible to lay down universal rules for dealing with such changes.

Effective dates applicable to a transaction date are unaffected by the fact that the results for an accounting period are taken back to an earlier year of assessment or carried forward to a future year of assessment.

Example 13 – Change of legislation applicable to a transaction date

Facts:

Z, an individual, carries on a business with an accounting period that ends on 30 April. Z was granted permission by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) to render accounts for the year ending 30 April on condition that the results are taken back to each immediately preceding year of assessment ending on the last day of February.

On 31 March 2020 Z incurred an expense in relation to the business. The section governing the deductibility of the expense was withdrawn with effect from 1 March 2020 and applicable to any expenditure actually incurred on or after that date.

Result:

The expenditure will not be deductible because the transaction took place after the effective date of the amendment (1 March 2020) that applies to all transactions on or after that date. This result is not altered by the fact that the deduction is carried back to the 2020 year of assessment that ends before 1 March 2020.

An effective date that applies to a year of assessment can, however, apply to a transaction conducted before or after the year of assessment if it falls within the accounting period and the results for that period are carried forward or back to the year of assessment in question.

Example 14 – Change in legislation applicable to a year of assessment*Facts:*

Y, an individual, carries on an auditing business with an accounting period approved by the Commissioner under section 66(13A) ending on 30 June.

On 31 May 2016 Y disposed of an office building at a capital gain of R120 000. Y derived no other capital gains or losses during the accounting period ended 30 June 2016 or during the 2016 year of assessment.

Result:

Under section 66(13A) the capital gain must be accounted for in the 2016 year of assessment ended on 29 February 2016.

Under paragraph 5(1) of the Eighth Schedule the annual exclusion for an individual was increased from R30 000 to R40 000 with effect from years of assessment commencing on or after 1 March 2016.

Under paragraph 10 of the Eighth Schedule the inclusion rate changed from 33,3% to 40% with effect from years of assessment commencing on or after 1 March 2016, that is, the 2017 year of assessment.

Since the capital gain is accounted for in the 2016 year of assessment, Y's capital gain must be reduced by the lower annual exclusion of R30 000 and will be subject to the lower inclusion rate of 33,3%. Y's taxable capital gain is therefore $(R120\,000 - R30\,000) \times 33,3\% = R29\,970$.

5. Tax period for value-added tax

A natural person or trust registered or required to be registered as a vendor for (value-added tax) VAT purposes is allocated a specific tax period for which the output tax and input tax is declared and the difference between them is calculated and either paid to or refunded by SARS for that specific tax period. The closure by a natural person or trust of its financial accounts on a day other than the last day of the year of assessment will not have any impact on its VAT liability for any tax period.

A vendor is required to submit VAT 201 returns and account for VAT to SARS according to the tax periods allocated to the vendor by the Commissioner. However, paragraph (ii) of the proviso to section 27(6) of the VAT Act makes provision for the Commissioner to allow a tax period to end on a fixed day instead of the last day of the month. The fixed day must fall within 10 days before or after the last day of a month and the future tax period approved by the Commissioner must be used by the vendor for a minimum period of 12 months commencing from the tax period the change is made.

For more information on the different tax periods, see Interpretation Note 52 "Approval to end a tax period on a day other than the last day of a month".

6. Conclusion

Under section 66(13A) a taxpayer who cannot conveniently return income from a business or profession to the last day of February may apply at a SARS branch office for permission from the Commissioner to draw up accounts to a closing date other than the last day of February. Any request of this nature is subject to conditions that the Commissioner may impose. Generally, the closing date so approved will determine into which year of assessment the results for the accounting period must be included and the dates on which provisional tax payments must be made.
