Subject: INTERNAL COMMUNICATION

As legal custodians of our Countries Economy we have an obligation to fight Corruption.

When enforcing tax and customs legislation, SARS plays a particular role within the Criminal Justice System. SARS is empowered through its legislation to conduct criminal investigation into tax offenses. Once the criminal investigation of the alleged tax offense is finalized, the matter is referred to the South African Police Service to give effect to entering the Criminal Justice System.

Furthermore, SARS has a role in administering laws that are not necessarily related to tax and customs but are essential to protect the South African economy, its for this reason that SARS work from time to time with SAPS to stomp out Corruption and identifying SARS employees who is guilty of this crime.
